

Jonny Griffiths, hello@jonny-griffiths.net, June 2019.

CV

Jonny Griffiths taught maths at Paston Sixth Form College in Norfolk for over twenty years, being a Gatsby Teacher Fellow for the year 2005-6, when he created the popular Risps website. He has studied mathematics and education at Cambridge University, the Open University, and at the University of East Anglia. He has also taught at St Dominic's Sixth Form College, and St Philip Howard 11-16 School.

He has written many articles on maths education for the Times Educational Supplement, which he drew upon for his classroom memoir, Denominator. The Association of Teachers of Mathematics published his ebook on proof, The Proving Ground, in 2018.

He has worked during the last five years for Underground Mathematics, Hodder, HarperCollins, York, MEI and Integral. He was the originator of the A Level Maths competition Ritangle in 2016, which he has authored for four years.

Claims to fame include singing with the 1980s band Harvey and the Wallbangers, and playing the character of Stringfellow on Playdays, the television programme for children. He has also had a theological book called The 100-Word Bible published by Darton, Longman and Todd.